

Reflections

- Do you agree or disagree with the writer's assertion that we feel loved when we are known and understood? Why or why not? When, in your life, has feeling utterly known made all the difference?
- As readers, we certainly get to know more about one Moses as we read through these chapters in Exodus. Whether through the readings or today's reflection piece, how do you see yourself reflected in the character of Moses?
- Take now the person of Pharaoh and the even bigger idea of empathy: who does the Egyptian king prompt you to have empathy for, especially when you disagree or do not understand?
- How is God prompting you to see God's ever-present, ever-seeing self in your life and in the world today? How might God be inviting you and your community to be known and know God, in the days going forward?
